The launch, originally scheduled for today, was postponed for three days, until Monday, when all three crewmen came down with colds. Apollo Nine 'coughs' to unexpected halt

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — The common cold and exhaustion Thursday grounded America's $340-million Apollo 9 earth orbital flight at least three days—from Friday until Monday.

It was the first time after 18

U.S. man-in-space flights that a launching had been delayed by astronaut illness, rather than technical problems, and was "a difficult decision to make," said Dr. Charles A. Berry, chief astronaut physician.

"The only thing I could guarantee is that we would have three sick crewmen if we launched Friday," Berry said. Stuffy noses and sore throats plaguing Apollo 9 astronauts James A. McDivitt, David R. Scott and Russell L. Schweickart, "are improved," he said, "but no one can absolutely guarantee that we will be ready to go Monday."

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said the postponement will cost an estimated $500,000, including weekend overtime pay for hundreds of launch crew members.

Berry disclosed in an afternoon news conference that signs of infection were first discovered last Monday in laboratory tests after Air Force Col. McDivitt and Scott and civilian Schweickart were given a thorough medical examination. NASA did not publicly report the colds until Wednesday.

There was also some concern Thursday that an engine pump in a second-stage engine aboard Apollo 9's huge Saturn 5 booster might cause vibrations during the launch, but officials said a careful data analysis laid these fears to rest.

Ironically it was the human machine that failed—rather than any part of Apollo 9 hardware, the most complex vehicle ever assembled for an American manned space flight.

Berry said McDivitt's cold appeared to be the worst of the three, with Schweickart the least affected.

In recommending a delay, the physician said he took into account a busy schedule during the first five days of Apollo 9's mission—a flight NASA terms "the most ambitious manned space flight to date, including the Apollo 8 lunar orbit mission."

McDivitt, Scott and Schweickart were told to continue taking decongestants, antihistamines and Vitamin C tablets and they were put in a modified quarantine status.

"Apollo 9 is a very ambitious mission and will demand the most from the crew, especially in the first five days," mission director George H. Hage said in agreeing to Berry's recommendation for a delay.

De Gaulle feels U.S. in last try

PARIS (AP) — Charles de Gaulle regards President Nixon as representing the United States' last chance to repair its relations with Gaullist France, high-ranking French officials said Thursday.

For this reason the French leader and his advisers are attaching unusual importance to the President's three-day Paris visit starting today.

But French officials, as well as Americans preparing for the presidential visit, see little hope for a dramatic reconciliation of positions. The catalogue of differences is too long and the issues separating the two nations too fundamental to permit quick accommodation, diplomats on both sides agree.

French interest, as signaled by Foreign Minister Michel Debre, centers on three main topics: the Middle East, Vietnam and international monetary reform.

'Ha-Ho-Hay' echo fades to 'Mao, Mao, Mao' call

Berliners give Nixon send-off

BERLIN (AP) — "Ha-Ho-Hay, Nixon is okay," chanted 6,000 factory workers, and the President responded into a microphone: "Ha-Ho-Hay, Berliners are okay."

This climaxed the tumultuous welcome Nixon received during his four-hour visit to West Berlin Thursday, and was the citizens' answer to the "Ho-Ho-Ho Chi Minh" chants at anti-Vietnam rallies of West Germany's New Left.

Ha-Ho-Hay is a German version of Hip-Hip-Hooray.

The New Left was on hand when Nixon made his tour, although dwarfed by hundreds of thousands of well-wishers. At one point, a snowball soared out of a crowd of hostile students and splattered on the window of the presidential limousine.

For Richard M. Nixon, the visit to this outpost city was a ringing success. Housewives waved bed sheets and pillow cases, crowds surged toward him at the Communist wall, and curious East German border guards snapped his picture.

The reception recalled the visit of President John F. Kennedy in June 1963.

For Nixon, who visited both East and West Berlin as a private citizen in 1963, a stop at the Communist wall dividing the city was a memorable moment. The surging crowd literally carried the President to the top of the 10-foot structure, alarming his security guards.

From a viewing platform, the President gazed into East Berlin, while the reinforced East German guard units stared back.

The Vopos, as the Communist Peoples Police are called by Berliners, trained cameras and binoculars on Nixon. Noticing their interest, the President smiled and gave an ironic half-salute in their direction.

Red roses were tossed toward the President's car as he got out to view the wall and a woman handed him a bouquet of tulips. "I'm sorry I can't take them to my wife," the President said.

Nixon stopped to look at the cross at the wall and the pictures of two young men who had died there trying to escape from Communist East Berlin.

Later at the 17th century Charlottenburg Castle, restored from a wartime ruin, Nixon signed his name in the city's Golden Book of notables, and accepted an old print of the historic edifice.

It was at the big Siemens electrical factory that 6,000 workers began the chant, "Ha-Ho-Hay, Nixon is okay." Smiling, the President grabbed his microphone and shouted back his version.

On his arrival at West Berlin's Tempelhof Airport, Nixon received a 21-gun salute as about 3,000 men of the U.S. Army Berlin Brigade stood at attention.

As the President stood under the U.S. flag and the banners of the 50 states, about 1,500 American school children shouted "We want Nixon."

President touches off Rome riot

ROME (AP) — President Nixon, warmed by a rousing send-off in West Berlin, arrived in Rome Thursday to a cheering welcome by thousands of Romans—and then in its wake the worst rioting this capital has seen in years.

The President was safely inside the Quirinal Palace conferring with Italian officials when the violence erupted in downtown Rome. Within minutes, rioters called out by Italy's Communist party were battling police only a few blocks from the palace.

Thousands of persons shouting "Nixon go home!" and chanting "Mao, Mao, Mao Tse-tung," hurled rocks and battled club-swinging police amid clouds of tear gas.

The fight raged along avenues and crowded side streets in the heart of the capital.

There had been anti-Nixon demonstrations in Berlin also, but they mustered scant support and consisted mainly of a couple of hundred shouting students and some snowballs, one of which hit the Nixon limousine.

Hundreds of thousands of citizens cheered Nixon in Berlin where he affirmed the U.S. commitment to defend that isolated sector.

Paraphrasing President John F. Kennedy's 1963 "I am a Berliner" speech, Nixon said: "In the sense that the people of Berlin stand for freedom and peace, all the people of the world who want freedom are truly Berliners."

"Remember, we are always with you."

Aware that Rome was seething with anti-Nixon demonstrators, Italian authorities had ordered in police from all parts of the country to mount a force of 10,000 to provide maximum protection for the visitor.

What surprised officials was the friendly reception given Nixon after his jet touched down at Ciampino Airport. As the motorcade headed for Rome, the crowd surged forward and engulfed the presidential car at one point. Nixon got out and began to mingle with the well-wishers. Hoisted to their shoulders, he waved his arms in delight.

The violence occurred after Nixon arrived at Quirinal Palace and began his talks with President Giuseppe Saragat and other leaders.

More than 6,000 demonstrators answered the call from the Communist party. They included students, workers, anarchists and small groups of Africans and Palestinian Arabs who tried to march on the palace.

Blocked by barriers composed of truckloads of helmeted and armed police, they turned away and stormed down to the Chamber of Deputies building next to the premier's office where Nixon is scheduled to continue his talks today.

Wild rioting erupted in the Piazza Colonna in front of the Parliament building.

Nixon attack victim at Paris peace talks

PARIS (AP) — North Vietnam and the Viet Cong teamed in a bitter attack on President Nixon on the eve of his visit to France, and the sixth weekly session of the Paris peace talks ended Thursday without any visible sign of progress.

Tran Buu Kiem of the Viet Cong's National Liberation Front accused Nixon of "camouflaging under beautiful words of peace... his black and vile intentions."

North Vietnamese Ambassador Xuan Thuy's words, though less vivid, supported the NLF complaint that the President was intensifying the war in Vietnam in hope of gaining leverage at these talks.

Both the NLF and Hanoi delegates accused Nixon of intensifying the war and, as the NLF delegate put it, "cherishing the illusion of acquiring a position of strength on the battlefield and at the conference table."

"If the Nixon administration continues to follow blindly along this muddy road," he said, "it will certainly suffer even more crushing defeats."

Kiem said that unless Nixon changes policy, these meetings "surely will end in failure." Thuy complained that Nixon

"refuses to draw lessons from the experience of the administration of President Johnson."

Nixon is scheduled to meet here Sunday with U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, and probably with South Vietnamese Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky.

The United States at Thursday's session protested the renewed Viet Cong shelling of South Vietnamese cities, telling the other side, "The consequences of these attacks are your responsibility."

While this might have sounded like a veiled suggestion that the shelling could interrupt the talks, the Americans have been steering clear of doing that.

Lodge added that the shelling "clearly raise a question as to your side's true desire to work toward a peaceful settlement of this conflict."

Lodge, departing from his prepared statement, sharply reminded the North Vietnamese: "There is no question that the understanding which was made clear to the North Vietnamese representative prior to the stopping of the bombing Oct. 31 remains in force."

North Vietnam insists the Oct. 31 bomb halt which permitted these four-way talks to be convoked was entirely unconditional and that the Viet Cong activity violates no agreement.

The session lasted 5½ hours with a half an hour break for lunch and an hour of exchange after the formal statements. Spokesmen said the informal exchange produced nothing notable.

Enemy's offensive slows down

SAIGON (AP) — The enemy's offensive slackened off on its fifth day Thursday but allied forces expected a second and more violent wave of attacks. The opening phase has proved almost as bloody as the big drive a year ago.

Allied sources said 5,300 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong soldiers have been killed in the offensive kicked off Sunday and 321 more have surrendered or defected.

The sources reported at least 300 Americans have been killed. A government spokesman reported 487 South Vietnamese troops killed, 1,707 wounded and 62 missing.

Some of the heaviest losses were inflicted on the enemy outside the big U.S. air base at Bien Hoa, 15 miles north of Saigon. After the enemy retreated early Thursday under a battering by allied infantrymen, tanks and planes, 234 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong bodies were counted on the battlefield, the allies reported.

Another 80 enemy soldiers were captured, including a deputy battalion commander and a company commander. South Vietnamese troops, who bore the burden of the fighting, lost 14 killed and 79 wounded. American losses were one killed and 10 wounded.

U.S. issues stern warning

(C) 1969 New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The Nixon Administration has given Hanoi explicit warning that continuation of this week's guerrilla attacks in South Vietnam would mean that the so-called understanding that produced last November's bombing halt had "expired."

The sharp reduction in enemy shelling and ground assaults of the past 24 hours is interpreted by top policymakers, at least tentatively, as Hanoi's positive response to this warning.

Governors refuse probe of campuses

(C) 1969 New York Times News Service WASHINGTON — The nation's governors refused Thursday to call for a federal investigation of student disruption on college campuses to determine whether a national conspiracy is involved.

The National Governors Conference defeated a resolution sponsored by Gov. Ronald Reagan of California urging the Department of Justice to launch "a full and complete investigation into the instigators, the causes and the effects of such violence."

Instead, the governors adopted intact the relatively innocuous policy statement approved Wednesday by the conference executive committee, which criticized "lawless acts" on campuses and pledged support for keeping higher education available in the face of protests.

The action was taken after President Spiro T. Agnew had assured the governors that the Justice Department, through the Federal Bureau of Investigation, was already keeping an eye on campus disturbances.

"As I understand it," Agnew said later at a news conference, "There is continuing activity in the Department of Justice in this area, not just when there are campus disturbances but routinely. They have an assignment to keep an eye on disturbances of this type."

He said that Atty. John N. Mitchell, who attended part of Thursday's conference, had told him that the call for such a campus investigation "really was superfluous."

The Reagan proposal was actually defeated twice. It was offered at the governors' closed business meeting, but they voted to substitute the executive committee's milder language.

Shaw denies conspiracy in murder

(C) 1969 New York Times News Service

NEW ORLEANS — The defense rested Thursday after Clay L. Shaw took the witness stand and denied that he had conspired to assassinate President John F. Kennedy.

He said he had admired and had voted for Kennedy. Shaw denied knowing either Lee Harvey Oswald or David W. Ferrie, the two men with whom he is accused of having conspired.

On rebuttal, the state promptly called a newly discovered witness who said he had seen Shaw with Ferrie at the Lakefront Airport in New Orleans in the summer of 1964.

Nicholas N. Tadin said he had driven out to the airport with his wife and that they saw Shaw and Ferrie emerging from a hangar.

Smiling Koreans ask 'frowning' questions

(C) 1969 New York Times News Service

CORONADO, Calif. — In "The Gypsy Tea Room," the Pueblo's crewmen sipped Korean wine and beer. They sat at wooden tables and listened to the quiet, even friendly, voices of a group of smiling North Korean civilians.

"They asked me to go to Russia and visit Moscow," communications technician Peter M. Langenberg told the court of inquiry Thursday. "I said, sure, that seemed to satisfy them."

Engineer Third Class Richard E. Arnold said: "They asked me if I'd receive (North Korean) guests when I returned to the United States. I told them yes I would. I believe I'd call the FBI."

A third crewman, Yeoman Third Class Stephen P. Ellis, said quietly: "They asked me if I'd want to come back to Korea after returning to the United States. I told them no, I don't think that would be possible."

A glimpse of the recreation room that the Pueblo's crewmen called "The Gypsy Tea Room" emerged Thursday during an all-day court session that focused on the crew's 11 months of imprisonment in wooden barracks near Pyongyang, North Korea.

Once again, the five admirals on the court of inquiry heard repeated stories of beatings and kickings, of machine guns placed between the eyes of a young enlisted man to force a confession, and of day and night interrogations.

One crewman broke down and wept Thursday. Gunner's Mate First Class Kenneth R. Wadley, a 30-year-old sailor who looks 10 years older, buried his face in his hands after completing his 30 minutes of testimony.

"The crew couldn't have gone through the 11 months over there without Law (Quartermaster First Class Charles B. Law Jr.) and Commander Bucher," he whispered, rubbing a handkerchief over his eyes. "That's all I have to say."

Quartermaster Law, 27, was the acknowledged leader of the enlisted men in prison. Law who suffered some of the heaviest beatings of the Pueblo crewmen, is now afflicted with permanent and severe eye damage as a result of malnutrition.

Today, for the first time, the crewmen were questioned in some detail about the "Gypsy Tea Room," a bare 12-by-15-foot area set aside by the North Koreans to apparently soothe and befriended the Pueblo crew.

During their imprisonment, virtually every Pueblo crewman was called separately from his prison cell and taken to the tea room

Ghetto crisis expands

(C) 1969 New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Whites have sharply accelerated their movement from the central cities in the past year while Negroes have even more dramatically slowed migration into them. At the same time, the inner-city ghettos have spread in area and slums have begun to emerge in the suburbs.

This "significant change" in the pattern of urban growth was a major new finding of a special study of the country's social behavior since the National Advisory Commission on Civil Disorders reported last March 1 that the nation was moving toward "two societies, one black, one white — separate and unequal."

A 90-page report on the nation's response to the crisis was released Thursday by the two private groups which jointly sponsored it — Urban America, Inc., and the Urban Coalition.

Two members of the commission — Mayor John V. Lindsay and Sen. Fred Harris, D-Okla. — and its staff director, David Ginsburg, a Washington lawyer, served on an advisory board for the study.

The authors of the report concluded that although some progress had been made toward eliminating discrimination and poverty, the polarization found by the commission has increased in the past year and no "serious start" has been made toward the changes in national priorities that the panel recommended.

Other findings of the study included the following:

ONE — Although a number of cities have adopted some of the commission's recommendations, no major city has established an external Police Review Board, which the commission said was needed to improve community relations.

TWO — Disorders on college campuses have taken on an increasingly racial character and are spilling over into high schools in both large and small cities.

THREE — Despite the rise in employment and income, welfare costs have continued to soar — from $6.9 billion in 1967 to $8.8 billion in 1968 — at least partly because the proportion of Negro families in central cities headed by females continued to rise, to 35 per cent last year. Of Negro families in the cities with income of $2,000 or less, more than half have no father in the home.

FOUR — The federal government has not devised any effective means of coordinating its many service programs. The situation has been further complicated by "the increasing volume of black voices saying they want to do it all themselves."

The study was conducted over a three-month period by a staff headed by Donald Canty, director of Urban America's Information Center. The commission disbanded after issuing its report last year but Lindsay, Harris and others encouraged further study and review on how the nation reacted to the report.

In the final version, the authors struck from the summary statements that relations between the police and slum dwellers had "changed for the worse, if at all," and that "communications between city hall and the slums increased, but did not necessarily improve."

"We felt that they were broad conclusions that we did not have evidence to support," Canty explained.

John W. Gardner, former secretary of health, education and welfare and chairman of the Urban Coalition, said Thursday that the report "makes it clear that the nation's response to the crisis of the cities has been perilously inadequate."

Senate target: unrest at taxpayer's expense

HARRISBURG (AP) — The chairman of the Pennsylvania House Appropriations Committee Thursday warned college officials that taxpayers are growing increasingly concerned over student unrest at institutions receiving public funds.

Chairman Martin P. Mullen, D-Philadelphia, predicted that the General Assembly this year would approve legislation to try to prevent incidents of violence which have been occurring in recent months.

"The people in Pennsylvania are demanding something be done about the situation occurring on college campuses around our state," Mullen told officials of the University of Pennsylvania.

The officials, headed by the university's president, Dr. Gaylord P. Harnwell, had come before the committee to try to justify a $16 million request contained in Gov. Shafer's proposed budget. The university is seeking $4.2 million more in state funds than it received for the current year.

Harnwell defended a five-day student sit-in which recently ended at the Penn campus in Philadelphia, calling the demonstration orderly and productive. He said a "middle-of-the-road compromise" was reached on the students' demands.

Mullen said he knew of no one in the legislature that had any quarrel with orderly demonstrations and said he sympathized with those students who through peaceful protest seek to make a better society.

The Philadelphia lawmaker added, however, that he was burned up by an incident at Pennsylvania State University where a group of students lowered the American flag to half mast to mark the fourth anniversary of the assassination of black nationalist Malcolm X.

"The General Assembly is going to do something this year to try to prevent this violence," said Mullen, a University of Pennsylvania alumnus.

The Senate Wednesday passed legislation that would provide jail terms for participants in unruly campus disturbances and revoke state scholarships or loans to those who commit criminal acts stemming from such incidents.

Despite delayed start he's dance king at 88

LANCASTER, Pa. (AP) — Seven years ago, 88-year-old Dr. Jerome G. Hess decided he needed some regular exercise to help ward off declining health.

He took up dancing and fox-trotted his way into a national dance championship.

Last year, Hess won the national fox trot-tango title in Miami, Fla. Now he's hard at work, keeping in trim for defense of his crown in late April.

"I'll be ready," the dancing doctor said Thursday as he glided through the steps of a tango. "I'm really looking forward to this year's competition."

His victory in the fox trot-tango class last year followed a second-place finish in 1967. He also has won local, state, area and regional dancing contests.

Most of his victories have been in the fox trot-tango class, but he also excels in the waltz, mambo, cha-cha, rumba, bossa-nova and jitterbug.

Dr. Hess gave up his Lancaster dentistry practice of 42 years in 1952 because of declining health. Nine years later, then 81 he decided he needed some regular exercise. He started dancing, enrolling at a Lancaster dancing school.

"I liked to dance," Dr. Hess recalled, "and in 1965, I enrolled in a dancing school in Philadelphia."

He's been journeying to Philadelphia for dancing lessons twice a week ever since, driving his car on the 130-mile round trip until a year ago. Now, he takes the train.

Mine use for garbage seems dead

HARRISBURG (AP) — The Pennsylvania mines secretary says plans to use Anthracite strip mine pits for massive trash dumps are dead in his view and he is canceling a projected pilot project.

"As far as I'm concerned, the whole idea of utilizing them (strip pits) for wholesale trash dumping no longer represents a viable concept for strip mine restoration," said Dr. H. Beecher Charnbury, secretary of mines and mineral industries.

Last week, Charnbury told the Senate Appropriations Committee he had selected an abandoned strip pit in the Oneida-Shepton area of Schuylkill County as a test dumping site.

Thursday he said, "Subsequent information we have received as a result of the publicity given this project clearly indicates to us that the whole idea should be abandoned."

Charnbury had proposed that his department and the state Health Department use the test pit to observe possible safety hazards involved in a dumping project planned by Eastern Land Reclamation Co. of Philadelphia.

Mayor Golden for some time had been attempting to formulate an association for Portland merchants.

Hartzell said the group was formed primarily to initiate cooperative projects with the merchants.

Hugh Colan leaves tax group post

NEWFOUNDLAND — Hugh Colan of Greentown R.D. has resigned as chairman and member of the committee elected last July by township residents at the suggestion of the Greene Township Supervisors.

The committee was organized to meet with the Greene Township Planning Commission in an effort to prepare a workable, enforceable subdivision ordinance for the township.

However, Colan, who is secretary of the Greene Township Property Owners and Taxpayers Association, a group which grew out of the original committee, is retaining his membership and office in the latter group.

The committee, headed by Colan until his resignation from the post, includes Russell Van-Buskirk, Jr., Robert Obert, John Dutton, Calvin Rose, Felix Olsommer, Robert Madsen, Harold Clark and Thomas Ferguson. Frank Burke and Paul Evans were named as alternates.

Grand Jury indicts three men

MILFORD — Three men were indicted by the Pike County Grand Jury Thursday on motor vehicle violations and one for receiving stolen goods.

Indicted were: Charles Haag of Dingmans Ferry on a charge of driving a car under the influence of intoxicating liquor.

Gordon Murray King of Lords Valley on a charge of driving a motor vehicle without a license. It is a second offense.

Gilbert Cron of Shohola, on a charge of receiving stolen goods. A first indictment against him was dismissed.

The grand jury also inspected the courthouse and county jail. The jurors reported leaking faucets and loose steps in the jail. They also recommended a heavy surface walk around the jail. An outdated fire extinguisher was also found in the courthouse and a window was not properly locked.

New pastor appointed in Bangor

BANGOR — The combined congregations of the Bangor-Roseto Presbyterian churches this week have named the Rev. John A. Miller as their new pastor.

The Rev. Miller has been pastor of the Pioneer United Presbyterian Church in Ligonier.

The Bangor and Roseto churches are currently joined in a "yoke" congregation. Plans are for a study of merging the two congregations.

The Rev. D. Keith Irwin of Kirkridge, moderator of the congregations since the time they were without a pastor, conducted the joint meeting.

Planning
major step

A hospital growing with the community and the borough in which the hospital is located expanding in step with the needs of the future is a refreshing approach to the area's development.
The General Hospital of Monroe County decided at Monday's meeting to launch a study of future needs due to the growth and rapid development of the locality.
This study will not only evaluate the hospital needs, but also make recommendations on improvement of present facilities.
One day later East Stroudsburg Borough Council, at an agenda meeting, received a report from its engineers in relation to its sewage plant needs for the future and its possible expansion within a period of two years.
The sewage expansion will be necessary to a great extent because of the growth of East Stroudsburg State College and the hospital. East Stroudsburg Borough Council is expected to officially accept the report at next Tuesday's meeting.
Both the hospital and borough recognize the fact that the future can only be bright for both if growth is properly charted and facilities of each brought to a point where a greater area and a greater population can be covered adequately.
The hospital and borough are both working on a long range master plan in which each will develop to its maximum strength under prevailing conditions.
This planning endeavor will enable both to develop rapidly and correctly and residents of the area will be the true beneficiaries.

Plans for peace

Pennsylvania's interest in its college campuses is a development worthy of praise.
Gov. Raymond P. Shafer recently summoned college and university presidents from various areas of the state to Harrisburg to conduct an informal discussion on riots and demonstrations being conducted on campuses across the nation and in Pennsylvania.
If many of the other states that have been hit hard by campus upheavals had taken this same type of precaution the problem may have been less severe.
The discussion gave each of the college officials an opportunity to present his ideas on reducing the acts of violence and demonstrations on campus. It also afforded the same officials an opportunity to explain their difficulties to the state and the degree of importance of their problems.
But, most of all it gave the college and university presidents an opportunity to compare notes, outline a program by which to fashion a peaceful solution to problems and a plan by which to work students and faculty members alike into the operation of the school on a democratic basis.
The meeting held in Harrisburg this week may not be the answer to the violence that has swept like a wave over campuses from coast to coast, but it should help the situation.
Each of the college officials who took part in the conference has a new insight on the problem, as do responsible individuals in state government.

Hunger investigation

By Congressional Quarterly
The Senate Select Committee on Nutrition and Human Needs, headed by Sen. George McGovern (D-S.D.), is investigating hunger in America and the Federal Government's response to it. This quiz will test your knowledge of current federal aid programs.
1. The Senate committee investigating hunger and Government food programs was established in 1968 following: (a) a plea from the Department of Agriculture; (b) an order from the President; (c) surveys by two citizens' groups and a television documentary.
2. Some critics of the Department of Agriculture have charged that: (a) it is more interested in the economic needs of farmers than in feeding the poor; (b) it has given away too much food; (c) it knows too little about agriculture.
3. The Federal Government provides food to the poor in all but which one of the following ways: (a) food stamps; (b) monthly cash payments for food; (c) school lunch and milk programs; (d) direct food distribution to various welfare programs and charities.
4. True or false: Food stamps enable the poor to buy stamps redeemable for food worth more than the cost of the stamps.
5. True or false: Food stamp programs are set up only when a state requests them, and local authorities determine who is eligible for them.

7. Though first established in 1939, the food stamp program was revived by the executive order of: (a) President Johnson; (b) President Kennedy; (c) President Eisenhower; (d) President Truman.
ANSWERS: 1. (c); 2. (a); 3. (b); 4. True; 5. True; 6. False; 7. (b).

'It could be our first one-man mixed reception'

Tom Wicker

More than adviser

(C) 1969 New York Times News Service

LONDON — At one of the press briefings conducted here by Ron Ziegler, President Richard Nixon's news secretary, and Trevor Lloyd-Hughes, prime minister Wilson's official spokesman, Lloyd-Hughes read a list of the British and American participants in one discussion.
"All the others present," he said, with British regard for class distinctions, "were what I would call advisers."
Ziegler spoke up immediately. "It should be noted," he said, "that Dr. Henry Kissinger participated in the meeting."
Ziegler was only starting publicly what was quickly apparent to most of Nixon's London hosts and to London-based Americans getting their first personal look at the Nixon foreign policy team. They say right away that Kissinger, the president's special assistant for national security affairs, is much more than just an "adviser."
Wide Speculation
Along with the heady impression Nixon created here of a president genuinely interested in the British view of things, he also left some lively speculation as to how things may ultimately sort themselves out between Kissinger and Secretary of State William P. Rogers.
When Nixon met with the Wilson cabinet at number 10 Downing St., for instance, the prime minister left all of what the British call "officials" in an upstairs room. That meant that only the president and Rogers, of the American party, were on or above the so-called "ministerial level" of the British participants. Nevertheless, within a few minutes, a summons arrived for Kissinger, who then joined the president and the ministers in the cabinet room.
Kissinger, after all, came into this new administration not only an acknowledged authority in international affairs but a familiar figure to many of those in the American and European governments with which the Nixon administration must work. He personally suggested some of the "private citizens" with whom Nixon met here.

Moreover, Kissinger is not only both a personal adviser to Nixon as well as the manager of the important apparatus of the national security council—he also has direct and frequent access to the president—and in Europe has been constantly at his elbow.
Rogers, a newcomer to the state department, its concerns, and the foreign governments with which it deals, nevertheless has a long and close personal relationship with Nixon, control of the necessary machinery of the state department, and an insiders' knowledge of the government bureaucracy, and how it works. These are solid assets for a long-distance runner, but for the moment, he appears clearly to be running behind Kissinger and his expertise and access.
This does not necessarily portend some shattering showdown struggle—it may only reflect the current state of development of the Nixon administration. Through the excellent impression the president created here with his attentiveness, his obvious interest in his hosts, his modesty, and the methodical way in which he sought amplification of any point new or unclear to him, and despite the technical knowledge of European and world affairs with which he came armed, some of those watching Nixon closely thought they saw the understandable lack of self-confidence of one who, though long experienced in politics, had never before really exercised power or had to accept great responsibility.

The Pennsylvania Story

Voice breaks silence

HARRISBURG — The once erstwhile "voice of legislative Democrats" has piped down — but perhaps not without good reason.
The "erstwhile voice" is that of Rep. Herbert Fineman, who during the past two years of legislative gatherings served as Minority Floor Leader of the House of Representatives, the "leader" of his bloc in the lower chamber.
This year however the bespectacled Fineman is no longer the House floor leader of his party; rather when Democrats were given control of the House in last fall's election run-off, he was "bumped up" to speaker of the House when the 1969 session came into being last month.
Now, being speaker of the House is, of course, the number one post in that chamber; as Fineman presides over the House, his word is just about the final word.
But — as the House Speaker, it is his job to run the 268-member chamber in a strictly down-the-middle, non-partisan manner, listening to floor deliberations rather than taking part in them.
Quite frankly, this column questions whether the black-thatched Fineman prefers the august and honorable post of the speakership to that of his old floor leadership post where his barometer wit and talents were tested daily, and in which at times he waxed somewhat eloquent.
Be that as it may, this legislative gent from Philadelphia who once had a word to say on every given issue, now finds himself forced to repose solemnly behind the House podium — while others carry on the debates and busses on the floor.
Apparently unable to contain himself no longer though, he broke his silence the other day by testifying — strictly as a private citizen — before the House State Government Committee, currently holding hearings on a bill to permit 18-year olds to vote.

Neman is in favor of the bill and is predicting it will pass the Legislature this year.
This column will not go into the arguments pro and con on the right of 18, 19 and 20 years olds to vote. They all boil down to whether you think 18-year olds are mature, knowledgeable and intelligent enough to exercise their franchise.
But Fineman's statement to the committee had some historical development that is interesting. It brings to mind the oft-forgotten knowledge that the United States just wasn't a very democratic country at its inception. We tend to forget that the right to vote was held by only a minority of people early in our history, and that it has only been extended gradually. Therefore, this column would like to cite part of his remarks, which seemingly might be well worth remembering in this day and age.
Easy to forget
"It is easy to forget that back in George Washington's time, people who did not believe in the Deity or who were members of a non-Christian religion were often denied the right to vote. Similarly, those who did not own property, or could not read, or could not pay a poll tax were also deemed unworthy of the right to vote.
In this nation's history, disenfranchisement due to religion was ended. With the Jacksonian revolution, property qualifications began to disappear, although they were to remain in some sections many more years. The poll tax is now dead and unreasonable requirements to be able to read at a certain level or in a certain language have been unconstitutional.

Hunters all are men

FIGURES IN A LANDSCAPE. By Barry England. Random House. $4.95.
The human will to survive, against terrible odds and despite excruciating physical and mental pain, is at the core of England's novel. It is a story of how two men face a long ordeal.
In an unnamed war somewhere in Asia — the enemy are identified only as "the Goons" — MacConnachie and Ansell are prisoners of war. Suddenly they break away from their captors and take to the underbrush. The nearest sanctuary is 400 miles across a mountain range, but they would rather gamble on escape than be turned into zombies.
MacConnachie is older, tougher and more experienced in combat, a man of action, gifted with an intuitive sense of imminent danger. Ansell is younger but brighter, lacking his companion's wily talents but a thinker who is needed to plan ahead. The two men complement each other.

In the beginning, the pair acquires a gun from a guard they have killed, and a swift raid on a small village gives them water and food.
But the enemy sends a helicopter to sweep back and forth across the rough terrain they are trying to cross, and time after time this deadly aerial monitor directs the ground troops to the trail. There are fierce ordeals of fire and water, of gunfights and monsoon rains.
It is a tense, masculine, rugged and suspenseful narrative.

Bent on revenge

THE AVENGERS. By Michael Bar-Zohar. Hawthorn. $5.95.
When in the waning days of World War II the Jewish Brigade attached to the British army rolled through Italy on their way to assigned occupation duty in Germany, says the author of "The Avengers," its young fighting men were bent on revenge — the burning of homes, the killing of men and the rape of women.
After all, according to the author's reckoning, 5,721,500 Jews had been exterminated by the Germans and the Jewish population purged in 33,914 localities.
At the last minute the British thought better of the assignment and halted the brigade before it reached the border. But not all its members gave up on their revenge. A small, select group sought out Fascists and Nazis hiding in Italy.

Dressed in British uniforms or anything else that suited their purpose, they arrested their victims and executed them by strangling, shooting or drowning, with or without impromptu trials.
Other Jewish avengers in other areas took up the vendetta. All in all, Bar-Zohar figures, they did away with one to two thousand Nazis.
"Compared with the number of Jews killed during World War II, this total seems insignificant," he writes.
"Because (the Jews) have been subjected to so much brutality and suffering, they have reached a level of humanity, of civilization, which led them to refuse to apply the ancient precept of 'an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth.' Otherwise, what terrible reprisals there might have been.

Chronicle of sea life

SONG OF THE SIRENS. By Ernest K. Gann. Simon & Schuster. $5.95.
Here is the chronicle of a writing man's seafaring life. It is centered upon Gann's adventures in the Albatros, a 92-ton schooner which he discovered at a Rotterdam dock and described as "a middle-aged maid of fading beauty and questionable virtue."
She was his 16th vessel since his boyhood days, counting all sizes and shapes (one was little more than a raft). He fell in love with the Albatros at once.
With a pickup crew he sailed her to San Francisco, not without some trouble with an auxiliary engine that balked most of the time. It took 118 days.
There, the schooner was converted into a brigantine, and with another pickup crew Gann sailed her to the South Seas and back to Honolulu. On one occasion the ship was caught in a storm with too much sail, resulting in a desperate fight.

By means of flashbacks, Gann tells of his experiences with other craft; describes an interval during which he tried in vain to be a commercial fisherman on the West Coast, and relates an incident with a piratical old skipper who had a salvage scheme.
Landlubbers need not be stumped by the many nautical terms contained in this book. They don't get in the way of a flowing narrative, and can be skipped over.
Best known for his work on flying, "Fate Is the Hunter," Gann is revealed here as a man with saltwater in his veins. He writes beautifully of the sea and his book is a pleasure to read.

Tax vacation?

(C) 1969 New York Times News Service

Sir:
My friend Hauser tells me that he is going to pay less taxes than I this year because he has bought a building which is depreciating. I understand that if one has invested in something that is depreciating the government will allow him to deduct enough from his usual tax bill to vacation in Jamaica.
Unfortunately, I am unable to find the correct table for calculating my own windfall under this provision.
I am 49 years old and have been depreciating at a terrifying rate for the past 15 years. I have invested large sums of capital, energy, faith and time in myself and would now like to vacation in Jamaica. Will you please send me the appropriate form for computing my depreciation allowance?
Yours truly,
Bofford Gill

to him enough of his tax money to vacation in Switzerland, and Herpel said that as a result of his buying municipal bonds he is getting back enough to buy a small republic in Central America.
If I had known when I was young that you would not send me back any money at all as a result of my buying food, clothing, and a television set, I would have gone into oil-well buying or municipal bond purchases years ago and might now be able to afford a little vacation in Jamaica.
I assume, since you don't earn any money yourself, that you are using my tax payments to send those remittances to Hauser, Carlin and Herpel. As I see it, this makes Hauser, Carlin and Herpel my dependents. May I claim them as dependents and take three additional exemptions on my income tax? This would not get me to Jamaica, but it might finance a motel weekend at the Luray Caverns.
Yours truly,
Bofford Gill

Dear Mr. Gill:
No.
Yours Sincerely,
Collector of Internal Revenue
Dear Collector:
How about this? Hauser, Carlin and Herpel have a large investment in me, as will be seen if you consider the workings of your tax system. Among the three of them, they contribute just enough taxes to the government to prevent my taxes from rising to a level at which I would be unable to buy food.
Thus, their combined tax payments amount to an investment in keeping me alive so that I can remain available to pay you the money you require to provide them with Central American Republics and Jamaica vacations.
In my view, they should be entitled to depreciate me, as I am obviously not going to be able to produce my present level of tax rebates for their benefit much longer at my present rate of depletion.
Between us, I calculate that Hauser and Carlin might be willing to give me 10 per cent of any additional tax savings they earn from depreciating me.
Herpel would plow it all back into tax-free municipals. I figure this might be enough to finance a January week in Atlantic City with my wife, though of course I'd pay the usual tax on the sums I received from Hauser and Carlin in token of my depreciation.
Yours sincerely,
Bofford Gill
Dear Mr. Gill:
Do I write like a building?
Yours truly,
Bofford Gill
Dear Mr. Gill:
You write like a man who has been so imprecident that he has failed and is now so angry that he doesn't want to see Mr. Hauser have a good time in Jamaica. If, however, you are a building, will you please forward to your owners the depreciation schedules enclosed in my last letter, so that they may plan their vacations?
Sincerely,
Collector of Internal Revenue

God or marijuana?

It had been a year since I left California to live in a small Midwestern town. Now I was flying back to the Coast to spend a summer with my best friends, Pat and Anne.

Pat was great. It was she I would live with for the summer, and Anne — well, her nickname, Sunshine, suited her perfectly. I could hardly wait to see them.

Looking out of the jet's windows, I could see the runway lights of San Francisco's International Airport. Thoughts flashed through my mind: would our friendship be the same as before I left? I would be living with Pat for the summer, would everything go all right? My thoughts were cut off by a sharp jolt as the jet touched down.

Walking down the ramp, I saw Pat and Sunshine waiting. We ran together as if a magnetic force were attracting us.

One was different. Pat was still the same person of a year ago, but Sunshine was different in an odd sort of way. After surface discussions we finally got to the facts. Sunshine was taking drugs.

She had first smoked marijuana eight months before at a party. Since then she had taken LSD, methedrine, and other drugs. I felt disappointed in her, but there seemed to be nothing I could do about it, at least not then.

After being in California one month, I had adjusted to these things. The hippie movement appealed to me; and drugs, though I hadn't yet tried them, were not so bad, according to my non-conformist friends. Drugs would help me find God, they said.

It all sounded kind of different — exciting. The hippie life was fun. Not conforming to the standards set by society was fun.

Seemed great. We hung out at a coffee shop most of the time, talking about things that mattered, like war. The life Sunshine had found now seemed great to me.

One night a guy came up to our table and asked us if we were interested in going to a "happening." Sunshine looked at me. I nodded and she assured him we would come. Little did I know what kind of party it would be. That party changed my life.

We arrived at the address to find a dimly lit apartment house. After a long wait at the door we were escorted into the living room where about 30 "flower children" were sitting in a circle on the floor.

We joined the group and sat listening to blaring psychedelic music and watching the mind-dazzling light show.

Long drag. Someone lit a cigarette, took a long drag and passed it to the person next to him. I glanced at Sunshine quickly and she nodded. It was marijuana.

The cigarette would be passed around and each person would be expected to take a drag. At first I panicked and wanted to leave. But then I thought I should stay and smoke the marijuana. This way I would really be accepted. Besides, they said it would bring me nearer to God.

The cigarette was getting closer and closer. My hands were icy, soaked in perspiration. I tried to hide my nervousness.

The person next to me had the cigarette and I watched him take a long drag. In a second I was holding the cigarette.

A bolt of lightning seemed to go through me. I saw reality for the first time. How absurd this whole situation was. What a stupid idiot I was for even considering this foolish act.

I passed the cigarette to Sunshine while saying a silent prayer for her. She took the marijuana and held it for a long moment. Then she looked at me and passed it on.

We left the party and walked home. My dormant faith in God had been brought alive by the drug scene. God pulled me through, and for this I am grateful. He pulled my best friend through too. It was a day of faith I shall never forget.

Winter work for summer bazaar here

BUSHKILL. — Preliminary plans for the bazaar and penny supper sponsored by the Ladies Aid Circle of the Women's Guild for Christian Service of the Reformed Church of Bushkill were discussed at the February meeting.

The bazaar will be held Aug. 21 beginning at 2 p.m. with the penny supper to be served from 5 to 7 p.m. Mrs. Argus Miller is chairman of the bazaar and baked goods.

Members are working on items for the bazaar to include woven rugs, crocheted pillow cases, aprons, pot holders, baby booties, tea towels and other fancy items.

A white elephant table will be under the direction of Mrs. E. B. Bartram and Mrs. Theodore Freeman.

Meanwhile, the quilters have also had a busy winter. Mrs. Albert Smith Sr., Mrs. B.H. Bensley and Mrs. E.B. Bartram have finished two quilts for Mrs. Gladys Clineman of Bushkill and are finishing a cross-stitch quilt for the auxiliary of the Bushkill Fire Co.

Those working on the carpet cutting and sewing are Mrs. Robert Gierend, Mrs. Louis Hoffecker, Mrs. Granville Flagler, Mrs. Thomas Herdman and a guest, Miss Valerie Smith.

Two bake sales were scheduled by the circle: the first on May 31 with Mrs. B.H. Bensley as chairman and the second on Aug. 30 with Mrs. E.B. Bartram and Mrs. Theodore Freeman as co-chairmen.

Reports included Christmas activities when the circle joined with the Bushkill Garden Club and the Ladies Auxiliary of Bushkill Fire Co. in sending cheer baskets to the sick and shut-in.

Refreshments were served with hostesses Hazel Eilenberger, Roberta Lee and Dolly Metzgar.

U.N. reports find women equal in law, not practice

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP) — The time-honored African custom of the bride's family being given a dowry by the bridegroom's family almost amounts to "the sale of the bride," in the opinion of the authors of a United Nations report.

The report adds that polygamy and concubinage sap the "worth and dignity of the woman as a human person."

In most African countries laws have given women equal civic and political rights with men, but in practice, says the report, they are not exercising these rights and responsibilities fully or effectively.

These are among the conclusions of a seminar on civic and political education of women which Secretary-General U Thant has forwarded to the United Nations Commission on the Status of Women. The seminar was held in Accra, Ghana, last December.

Because traditional customs and habits die hard, some of the worst practices blocking the complete emancipation of women are those perpetrated by men.

Answers to a questionnaire sent by the United Nations to its 126 member-nations indicate that what is true of Africa — polygamy apart — is true of the rest of the world.

In other continents, too, lack of opportunities and education, as well as prejudices and deep-rooted customs, prevent women from achieving equality with their men-folk in the development of their countries.

A report by Thant embodies an analysis of replies from member governments to the questionnaire on the role of women in economic and social development.

Here, too, many countries affirm that women have long since achieved full equality with men under the law but are not yet functioning "to their full potential."

Twenty-eight U.N. member nations, geographically ranging from Austria to Zambia, frankly admit that the fundamental attitude of men toward women — and of women toward themselves — inhibits the distaff contribution to national development.

Canada, one of the 28, goes so far as to say that such attitudes impose limitations on women the moment they are born.

In the opinion of some countries, basic attitudes reflected in the dictum "A woman's place is in the home" are the measure of what prevents full participation in national life. France, Libya, Malta and Norway all cite this man-made viewpoint.

The general feeling among men and women that men should be the leaders and policymakers, and their predominance in engineering, medicine and the sciences, are mentioned by Canada and Austria as further reasons for the lack of petticoat rule in the professions.

The African states of Kenya and Cameroon blame women for much of their own difficulties, asserting that the attitude of educated women at times left room for improvement. Cameroon says women with a background in home economics sometime become "extravagant and demanding wives," while some other trained women are vain and flirtatious with their male colleagues.

The African seminar alone put the blame on "heavy domestic commitments," such as excessive child-bearing and lack of planning in the home, for women's failure to play an active role as citizens.

United Nations' findings suggesting a higher incidence of illiteracy among women than men indicate the scope of the basic problem.

Many countries say they have begun programs aimed at educating women to a fuller role in national affairs.

The Accra seminar recommended that equal educational facilities be made available to both sexes.

Churchwomen United Day of Prayer services

EAST STROUDSBURG — Twenty churches of the Stroudsburg and surrounding area will join for the World Day of Prayer Service sponsored by Church Women United on Friday, March 7, at 1:30 p.m. in the East Stroudsburg Methodist Church.

There will also be ecumenical services by churches in the Tannersville area and those in the Mount Pocono area.

Underlying the ecumenical nature of these world-wide services is this year's date which was changed from the first Friday in Lent to the first Friday in March because Lent comes at a different time for the Orthodox communions.

Mrs. Morris Peckman and Mrs. Harold C. Eaton are co-chairmen for the service in the East Stroudsburg Church in which members of cooperating churches will participate. Theme of the service this year is "Growing Together in Christ."

It was drawn up by women from Africa who were called on by an international committee to evolve a relevant, international service in which women in 13 countries, territories and protectorates will join in a common plea.

Offerings will be used for an ecumenical ministry of inter-religious reconciliation in Vietnam; to help educate women in 13 Christian colleges in Africa, Asia and Latin America, to welcome 40,000 students coming from abroad to study in the United States; and support magazines and books for new literates in 18 countries.

Nationally, the offerings are used for migrant farm workers, Indian-Americans in off-reservation colleges; as well as adult services provided in Braille for the blind and in Spanish for people speaking that language.

Dress up bananas for company

Sherried bananas good with vanilla ice cream.

By CECILY BROWNSTONE

Associated Press Food Editor. Knowing cooks often use bananas for quick-to-make desserts. Skillet-cooked, broiled or baked they're great to serve "as is" or with a topping of vanilla ice cream or whipped cream.

Different parts of the country have different ways of preparing the bananas "as is." In New Orleans, Brennan's Restaurant serves Bananas Foster. For this dish, butter is melted in a chafing dish and blended with brown sugar. Then the bananas are added, cooked slightly and sprinkled with cinnamon. Now comes the exotic final touch: banana liqueur and rum are ignited and the bananas are basted with the flaming liquor. Quite a dish!

In California and Florida, bananas baked with butter, honey, and orange juice are popular. This way the bananas may be offered as dessert or as a meat accompaniment.

The following recipe for Sherried Bananas comes from Georgia. The original recipe called for lots more sugar and was served as an accompaniment for pork or ham. The friend who gave us the recipe prefers a smaller amount of sugar and offers these Sherried Bananas with ice cream.

Ann Landers

Mania for saving

Dear Ann Landers: Mom has a mania for saving things. Our closets are jam-packed with clothes we outgrew ages ago. We are teen-agers now but Mom refuses to get rid of our Brownie uniforms and the socks we wore when we were five years old.

It's hard to get Mom to buy us anything new because she insists our closets are bulging. Well, they are, but almost everything in there dates back to the Johnstown flood.

The same hangup goes for food. Mom refuses to throw out anything. She saves a table-spoon of cole slaw and half of a wiener. The icebox is loaded with plastic containers but darned little food. Why does she do this? Is there some way to cure her?

SANTA ROSA TEENS

Dear Santa: Your mother is a pack rat, and there is no known cure for this type. Maybe she was poor when she was young and the fear of being poor again haunts her. Often this is the reason people can't bear to throw anything out.

Ask Mom for an hour of her time. Take out all your out-grown clothes and model them for her. Then suggest she call Goodwill Industries or the Salvation Army and give the clothes to someone who can use them.

Dear Ann Landers: A woman who signed herself "Heartsick" asked, "Is there a special place for tired worn out wives to go when they are no longer loved or wanted?" She then compared her plight to the American Indians who, she said, put out their old and sick and left them to die. This cruel myth is totally without documentation and I hope you will set the record straight.

Few cultures can approach ours when it comes to paying respect to the aged. In addition to having been robbed of our rightful heritage, we have been poorly depicted by historians. You do not help the situation when you perpetuate such degrading lies. And please don't tell me I am unduly sensitive. I am protesting not only Heartsick's statement, but the attitude of most white men toward the first authentic Americans. It's disgraceful.

ONE OF THE MOHAWKS

Dear Friend: I agree the American Indian has been shamefully treated and it's high time restitution was made by our government. My apologies for allowing Heartsick's statement to go unchallenged. It was not only inaccurate but an insult.

Dear Ann: I divorced my wife because she was a terrific boozier and shackled up with everything that walked in pants.

We have three small children whom I love very much. I was certain the court would award me custody but I was badly mistaken.

Whenever I go get the children for the day, they are black and blue from beatings and filthy dirty. I don't think they eat properly either because they are always starved for milk and fresh bread.

I can give these kids a much better home than their mother but the court says no. Why? Why? Why? What can I do about it?

MUSKEGON

Dear Muskegon: You need another lawyer. And P.S. If any of your children are in school, a teacher could be your best witness.

Archaeologists believe that construction of the Pyramid of the Sun near Mexico City kept 10,000 laborers busy for 20 years.

Erma Bombeck

Not-so handy

A woman in Washington writes, "I have always enjoyed your column, and would have continued to do so had you not invaded my privacy. My husband decided to put vinyl-covering on the bathroom walls. He applied the stick-em goop, which did not make it stick.

Finally, he said, "I think if you would heat an iron and could put a newspaper under it and apply heat it would stick." I plugged in the iron and handed him a newspaper. Sure enough it stuck. Then he said, "Come here. Here's a picture on the wall." I said, "It's Erma."

"You are sorta catty wampus, but the picture is good. I would not have minded but I never feel like I'm alone anymore."

Dear Lady, say no more. You are not the first woman to be held captive by an idiot with a boy scout hatchet and a warm can of beer.

Grapes growing
I have spent 20 years with a man who hangs wallpaper with the grapes growing up out of the baseboards. He once turned off the water from June to the middle of September. As for electrical outlets, just the other morning all the lights in the kitchen dimmed.

"What's the matter?" asked one of the kids.

"One of several things," I said. "Either your father has been fiddling with the wiring or they are electrocuting Steve McQueen in the state capital."

When their father came in the room he said simply, "Did you push the toaster down? (We nodded) Well then, what did you expect?"

These reluctant handymen are a threat to the mental health of housewives everywhere. They are not only defensive about their work, they gravitate back and forth between hound-dog stubbornness and maddening attention details.

We had neighbors once who named a clothes post in their divorce suit.

They had been a relatively happy couple and appeared to be quite stable. They had hung wallpaper together, assembled Christmas toys together and passed the acid test of all married couples—pruning shrubbery. Who would have ever suspected Hank and Rheba were normal.

The story I got was that one day Rheba asked Hank to put in a clothes post for one of those umbrella-type clothes dryers.

Hank is his usual quest for perfection then continued to have surveyors stake out the ground, have the soil tested by experts, aerial photos made of the plot and a meteorologist file a report on which way the wind velocity would prove the most beneficial to drying. He visited the library every waking hour, talked to cement men, bought a garage full of tools and exactly three months from the day of the request ventured into the backyard and drilled straight through his water line.

Rheba ran away with a sewer man from the sanitary department. Hank got custody of the clothes post.

As for the pitiful soul in Washington who must share her accommodations with me, don't worry. I can't see a thing without my glasses.

13,500 Easter Seal letters mailed to raise $9,000 fund

STROUDSBURG — More than 13,500 letters containing Easter Seals were mailed Thursday, launching the 1969 campaign in Monroe County to raise $9,000.

The funds will be used to continue the work of the Monroe County Crippled Children and Adults Society.

The stuffing of the Easter Seal envelopes was done by members of the society's board of directors and by several volunteer groups in the community, including the inter-society council of East Stroudsburg State College, and Junior Girl Scout Troup 355, which is sponsored by the Clearview Parent-Teachers Assn.

According to Mrs. Deborah Hickey, East Stroudsburg R.D. 2 and Mrs. Coby Lee, Stroud Township, campaign co-chairmen, this year's campaign will conclude April 6.

For the first time, Easter Seals canisters will be placed at various business locations throughout the community. The canisters have been distributed by Alpha Chi Fraternity at East Stroudsburg State College.

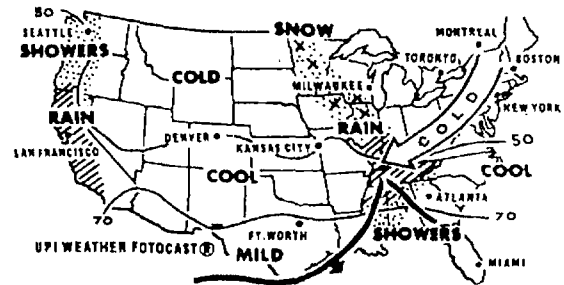

"Easter Seals donations help restore crippled children to usefulness for themselves and their community. They help handicapped adults push back their special limitations and regain purpose," said Mrs. Lee.

"A gift to Easter Seals may help a Stroudsburg man learn to use a new arm or leg; or it may teach a child from Brodheadsville how to walk on crutches; or it could give training to a youngster from Pocono Lake with a speech defect," Mrs. Hickey said.

Long range soil plan approved

STROUDSBURG — The Monroe County Soil and Water Conservation District is preparing for publication its "long range" district conservation program and study.

The draft has been finalized and the district approved its publication during the regular meeting held Wednesday night.

The book will include more than 50 pages of tabulated data outlining a revised overall conservation program which is designated to meet the demands and needs of the area's current and future needs. Among the resources and features included are geology, soil, agriculture, woodland, rural, urban, water and recreational planning.

The information will be made available to all planning and land development agencies and related interest groups.

Douglas Williams, recently appointed administrator to the Monroe County Planning Commission was introduced to district members and agency representatives. Williams will represent the planning commission which is one of the cooperating agencies.

The district will also send two representatives to the District Directors Workshop to be held in Tunkhannock on Thursday, March 13. The workshop will cover the relationship of agency activities to the soil and water conservation district program; relate the total program of the state conservation commission to local district and enlighten new director-members on organizing and implementing effective district programs.

James Johnson, conservationist, reported that the "borrow" or geologic investigation is underway at dam site 466 of the Upper Brodhead Creek Flood Control Project, located on the Buck Hill Falls property.

Johnson pointed out that 50 per cent of the land surrounding the flood control project is under the district cooperator's agreement.

Arlington "Bud" Martin, county Commissioner-director, and chairman of the Brodhead Creek project said the Commissioners will be anxious to await a report of the geologic survey.

East Stroudsburg, P.V. approve Vo-Tech school

EAST STROUDSBURG—East Stroudsburg School Board Thursday night became the third area school board to approve the articles of agreement in the proposed Monroe County Vocational-Technical School.

The vote was 6-2 with one board member, Theodore Regina absent. The two members casting negative votes were Dr. Richard Krueger and Samuel Kupiszewski.

Pocono Mountain and Stroudsburg school boards approved the trade school earlier this month.

The president of the East Stroudsburg Teachers' Assn., Douglas Schoonover, addressed the board before it voted on the proposed vo-tech plan.

Schoonover who said he was representing the East Stroudsburg area teachers recommended a "comprehensive school," which, he said, was not quite the same as the present proposed vo-tech school.

"We believe that a comprehensive high school is superior to separate academic and vocational-technical schools," Schoonover said. "We do not believe in creating the idea of separate societies for the various segments of workers in a democracy."

Quality education
"We favor quality educational programs and insist that teachers have an active role in planning and designing curriculum and school facilities," he added.

Schoonover said that he had been misquoted by two newspapers outside of this area, when, according to Schoonover, both papers said he had been opposed to the area vo-tech school. "At no time were we, the teachers of East Stroudsburg Area Schools, opposed to the vo-tech school," Schoonover said.

Several passages
He quoted several passages from different periodicals on the vo-tech school. Most of these quotes were a direct or indirect rebuttal to the establishment of the trade school.

"Have we exhausted inquiries into (the establishment) of an area two-year community college?" Schoonover asked the board.

He said two major problems confronting the presence of an area vo-tech school would be rescheduling of four district school study schedules and rerouting of bus transportation routes.

He asked the board "will a vo-tech school take care of high school dropouts? Will it be geared to community needs? Will it be able to satisfy a local labor market?"

Schoonover said he favors a full-time comprehensive vo-tech plan but not a half day vo-tech program which is what is being recommended under the present vo-tech articles of agreement.

Walter H. Sebring, Monroe County superintendent of schools, when contacted in Harrisburg Thursday night, said, "I am very happy at this time to learn that Pleasant Valley and East Stroudsburg have approved the vo-tech plan, as did Stroudsburg and Pocono Mountain."

"I wish to congratulate all forward looking school directors and anyone else who made possible a much needed vo-tech school. This is a big day in Monroe County education."

East Stroudsburg borough workmen backfill a hole which had to be dug to replace a water main connection which broke Thursday at approximately 6 a.m. The break occurred at the corner of Spangenberg Ave. and Smith Street. (Staff Photo by MacLeod)

E. Stroudsburg water main breaks

EAST STROUDSBURG — A water main connection on the corner of Spangenberg Ave. and Smith St. blew out Thursday at approximately 6 a.m. causing minor havoc with some of the residents because of "dirty" water. Borough crews arrived promptly at the scene and began repairs to the connection. By 5 p.m. the faulty connection was repaired and the back filling was completed.

Donald Gage, assistant borough manager, said the cloudy water problem should be cleared up sometime today.

Canfield resigns weights position

STROUDSBURG — Monroe County Sealer of Weights and Measures Gerald D. Canfield, Bartonsville, Thursday submitted his resignation from the post to the Monroe County Commissioners.

The commissioners accepted the resignation which is to be effective March 1.

In a letter to the commissioners, Canfield cited increasing duties as a Justice of the Peace as the reason for submitting his resignation.

Canfield came under fire early this year for alleged inactivity as the official sealer of weights and measures, following a survey of the area taken by The Pocono Record.

Following the newspaper publication, Canfield was asked to appear before the county commissioners to report on his activities for the last six months of 1968.

At the meeting with the commissioners, he admitted his uncertainty concerning particular portions of his official capacity.

After Canfield's appearance at an official meeting, the commissioners corresponded with the state Bureau of Standard Weights and Measures to determine the exact duties of a sealer of weights and measures.

No successor has been named to the post of county sealer of weights and measures.

The commissioners announced that outside voter registration would be held in Barrett and Chestnut Hill townships and Mount Pocono throughout the month of March.

The courthouse will also be open one night per week during the final month of registration. The dates which the courthouse will be open will be announced later.

The decision for the outside registration was made after receiving requests of that nature from Dr. Evan C. Reese, Republican county chairman.

E.S. board accepts power right-of-way

EAST STROUDSBURG — The East Stroudsburg School Board accepted the recommendation of the East Stroudsburg School Authority and consented to the installation of a Pennsylvania Power and Light Co. 55 kv line right-of-way.

Approval was granted "providing lines are underground on school property," and that a proper appraisal be made of any damages on school property in construction of the line.

The school authority's eight-member board terms were rescheduled with the following results:

—Alton Jones, three years;

BRODHEADSVILLE — Pleasant Valley School Board was the fourth and last Monroe County school district to give formal approval to the establishment of an area vocational technical school Thursday night.

Only brief comments preceded the formal roll-call vote by directors who favored the vo-tech school, five votes "yes" and two votes "no."

The regular meeting however, was interrupted for some 45 minutes when the board went into executive session, prior to taking the formal vote.

Final verbal disapproval was given by directors Joseph Decker and Mrs. Nettie Romascavage. Absent during the meeting was director Clark George who is vacationing.

Director Maynard Sterner was called during the meeting, prior to the vo-tech vote, and had to take leave for a business call.

Motion made

Mrs. Virginia Stiff made the motion that the board sign the articles of agreement which will represent the official commitment of the school district to participate in the establishment and operation of the vo-tech school. Director Kenneth Hawk moved to second the motion.

Mrs. Romascavage, during discussion prior to the vote, stressed that the school is a potential financial burden on the taxpayers and doubted the projected cost figures. She recommended the question should be placed on a referendum vote before the public.

Solicitor Lester Brown explained that this cannot be done.

John Rinker, board president, presented before the board, 11 letters from industrial firms in the area, businesses and from the office of the superintendent of schools, requesting that the board consider approval of a vo-tech school.

Decker said he wanted to make just one final statement, saying, "I don't think that we owe any allegiance to the students of the county, the taxpayers of the county or the industrial firms of the county. Our allegiance is within the Pleasant Valley School District; to take care of ourselves."

Brown and the administration were given the authority to execute the necessary agreement for the proposed vo-tech school.

Counseling approval
Decker asked the board to allow the administration to discuss with area clergy and other qualified personnel possible ways to approach problems of students requiring counseling on an individual, personal basis. Approval was given.

There was some discussion as to ethics and conflicts of clergy from various faiths entering the school and influencing students with the various religious doctrines. Decker said he sees a definite need to make other counseling services available, to students on a voluntary basis on released time.

Rev. John Nesbitt, pastor of Effort United Methodist Church, agreed there would be some problems involved.

Stettler files petition
EAST STROUDSBURG — George J. Stettler, 46 Temple St., East Stroudsburg, announced Thursday that he had filed his petition for candidacy for the Republican nomination in the race for mayor.

Insurance increase
Superintendent Mrs. Pauline Peterson said there would be a Blue Cross increase of 80 cents per person in next year's school budget.

The board hired seven substitute teachers.

Costly settlement
The report stated that the treatment at the plant is excellent.

Treatment excellent
However, the consultants feel that with the projected growth within the borough itself and East Stroudsburg State College, the plant must be expanded.

Romeo Falciani, representing the consultants, said that the report projected the growth of the community and college in the next 15 years, and the result was that the plant expansion must be double the present capacity.

The plant was originally designed for the equivalent of 10,000 people. The recommended expansion is to handle the capacity equivalent of 20,000 people.

Falciani pointed out that at the present time, the borough must consider handling the sewage for the 112 new apartment units being opened for occupancy on Greentree Drive.

Also that consideration must be given to the fact that one dormitory at ESSC is now under construction which will house 600 people, plus two more dormitories which are now on the drawing boards for an added 600 people.

Falciani added that the normal residential growth which is taking place currently, coupled with the industrial growth, current and projected, will have to be considered.

Hard facts
In getting down to the cold hard facts of finances, the recommended expansion would require a capital outlay of $1,200,000.

Unfortunately, council's problem does not stop there.

In September, 1968, council received a report from Buck, Siefert and Jost, consulting engineers, who have since been replaced, concerning the water distribution system in the borough.

The report combined the requirements for the borough and ESSC with projected figures for the year 1980. Again, the crux of the report said that it was absolutely necessary to expand the distribution system.

The cost of the recommended additions to the system, plus a small additional source of supply was projected at $558,000.

Council accepted the validity of the report.

At Tuesday's meeting, council members, down to the last man, were in definite agreement that the two problems were immediate.

Method of expansion
They were also in agreement about one other thing.

That is to find some method to expand both the sewage treatment plant and the water systems without hurting the borough taxpayer.

At the present time, borough officials are gathering information on the availability of grants from both the state and federal governments.

To date, the federal grant standard is running at approximately 30 per cent of the total cost of such projects while the state grants are approximately 25 per cent.

However, borough officials are confident that grants could be obtained to cover more than 55 per cent.

In any case, the taxpayers in East Stroudsburg can rest assured that the borough government will make a concerted effort to provide the necessary facilities without having to increase water rates or taxes, if at all possible.

Disaster plans set for event
EAST STROUDSBURG — Representatives from 10 participating organizations met Thursday night at the Monroe County General Hospital to discuss preliminary plans for the disaster drill scheduled for April 11.

The three-fold mission of the drill is to test the hospital disaster plan and to test the coordination between the hospital and all other authorities involved in the disaster drill.

Also, the drill will provide critical observation during all phases of the disaster drill.

The drill will start at Strickland's Inn, Swiftwater, with a simulated fire scheduled to occur at approximately 12:30 p.m.

At the outbreak of the fire, the management of Strickland's will call the local fire and police departments, the state police, local ambulance service and the General Hospital.

Respective plans
Upon notification, all involved agencies will implement their respective disaster plans.

The Army depot will furnish personnel, trucks for transportation, additional first-aid supplies, a helicopter if needed and fire equipment, if needed.

The injured at the inn will be assembled for transportation to the General Hospital.

Upon completion of the drill, all referees will meet in the hospital for preparation of an analysis of the drill with special emphasis upon the improvement.

In attendance at the meeting were Dr. Joel Samuelson, chairman of the drill; Elwood LeBar and Jack Fox, of the hospital security police; Jack LaBar and Joseph DeKenzis, of the Red Cross; and Capt. Rex Worthy, Salvation Army.

Also, Capt. Spencer Johnson, of the Tobyhanna Army Depot; Sgts. James Grace and Robert Strempek, Pennsylvania State Police; Fred Metzgar and Charles Brader of the Central Ambulance Assn.; Ernest Bishop, Mt. Pocono Fire Chief; Ed Strickland, of Strickland's Inn; Charles E. Swisher, of the hospital administration and William J. Reaser, hospital public relations.

Two arrested for shooting phone cable
MOUNT POCONO — Telephone service was cut off in a wide area from Tannersville to Tobyhanna, including Tobyhanna Army Depot late Tuesday afternoon.

The cause? Malicious damage from rifle slugs to a main telephone carrier cable owned by Bell Telephone Co.

Mount Pocono State Police investigated the trouble call and came up with two Philadelphia men, accused of firing 22 calibre rifle slugs in the main cable located along Route 715 near Meisertown in Pocono Township.

Gerard W. Cain, 21, and Joseph F. Lenihan, 23, were arraigned Wednesday night before Mrs. Emma Merwin, Mount Pocono justice of the peace. The defendants were released on their own recognizance and waived a preliminary hearing.

Police said telephone employees had to splice 15 damaged wires before service could be restored to the area late Tuesday night. Damage was estimated at $300.

The young men told police they were shooting crow and squirrel in the area.

Monroe County's tax rate to be increased

STROUDSBURG — Monroe County residents will have to wait no longer for the announcement they had all hoped not to hear concerning county taxes in 1969.

In a brief statement Thursday, Monroe County Commission Chairman Elwood Hintze said that county taxes would be raised this year "possibly in the realm of three mills."

"It will be necessary to raise the millage to meet county requirements," he said.

If the increase is raised the anticipated three mills, taxpayers will have their millage set at 14, rather than the current 11 mills.

The county has a ceiling of 20 mills, it was explained.

The announcement concerning the increase was made after Hintze reported that the proposed budget of the county for 1969 is in its final stages of preparation.

He added the proposed budget will hopefully be officially presented on Monday for the commission's approval.

The exact figures in the budget have not yet been made public or final, but the commissioners all agreed that it would be in excess of $2,000,000, thus making it the highest budget in the county's history.

In other business, the commissioners voted to hold a special meeting at 11 a.m. today to award the bid for the county's insurance package.

Only two bids were received by the commissioners Thursday. Commissioner Mrs. Nancy B. Shukatis reported that 11 insurance firms took copies of the specifications.

Hintze said that replies were received from companies which did not submit bids and their reasons were that the specifications were too vague or that they did not have time enough to study the specifications.

The bids were submitted by Crowe Insurance Agency, Inc., East Stroudsburg, and Joseph H. Small Insurance Agency.

Crowe's bid for the annual policy, including workmen's compensation, totals $10,082.

Small's bid totals $10,489.61 with $100 deductible, or $10,181.61 with $500 deductible. His bids also include workmen's compensation.

Both firms submitted a number of optional coverages. It was for this reason that the commissioners delayed action on announcing the award of the contract pending their study of the coverages.

Costly settlement

Problems may cost E.S. $1,758,000

By BOB GROFF
Pocono Record Reporter

EAST STROUDSBURG — East Stroudsburg Borough Council members are currently facing two immediate problems, which, together, could add up to $1,758,000 before they are solved.

The two problems are the expansion of the borough's sewage treatment plant and the expansion of the water distribution system.

On Tuesday night, council members received a report from the borough's consulting engineers, Albright and Friel, Philadelphia, concerning the sewage treatment plant.

The gist of the report is simply that the plant is currently operating at slightly over the designed capacity and could conceivably continue to do so for another year or two.

The report stated that the treatment at the plant is excellent.

Ted's Tidbits

East Stroudsburg High has not won a Lehigh-Northampton League title in basketball since the 1930s. But now there is hope and with a little luck the Cavaliers could go all the way in 1970.

Eastburg completed its best season in 13 years last week with an 11-11 record in its second year under coach Chick Daniels.

This in itself is not enough to start talking title. But 14 of the 16 boys carried on the varsity and junior varsity teams will be back. Only reserves Don Fritz and Willie Gupton graduate.

Among the 14 returning players are two-year lettermen Matt Hood (6-4) and Tom Kishbaugh (6-0). Hood scored 320 points for a 16.8 average while Kishbaugh led the Cavaliers with 351 points for a 16 point average.

In addition to these two boys are several boys who will only be juniors. In this category are Doug and Jim Schoonover, Nick Ullo, Art Perryman, Joe Viechnicki and Jim Waller.

Eastburg's 11-11 record was the best in the county and gave it the Dr. Frank Maguire Memorial Trophy. Pocono Mountain had won the award in 1968.

Not since 1956 under Dick Forrester (15-6) have the Cavaliers done so well. The next best season was 8-8 in 1948 under Walt Stem.

But the varsity was not the only court team representing East Stroudsburg that had a successful season.

The junior varsity, coached by Ed Christian, finished 13-8; the 9th grade team coached by Doug Schoonover was 9-5 and won the northern division of the Lehigh-Northampton 9th Grade League and the 7th and 8th grade team of John Sysko was 9-3. In all a total of 45 boys took part in the basketball program in grades seven through 12.

The East Stroudsburg Invitational Basketball tournament has been increased from four to six teams for this year. The tourney is scheduled for Dec. 27, 29 and 30.

Newcomers in the tourney are Pocono Central Catholic and Delaware Valley. They join defending champion Pocono Mountain, Jim Thorpe, Plains High and East Stroudsburg.

Ralph Burrows, principal; Jack Kist, athletic director; Bob Burrows, faculty manager, and Daniels, make up the tournament committee and expect the tournament to be "better than last year."

East Stroudsburg State's Steve Guter closes out his career tonight against Lock Haven in Koehler Fieldhouse and don't be surprised if he comes close to his single game record of 57 points.

The 6-4 captain, the only senior on the squad, is nearing the 500 point mark for this season and the 1,000 mark for two years.

Last season he scored 468 points and going into tonight's game he has 477. A 23-point effort puts him over the 500 mark and 55 would send him past 1,000.

There's an assistant coach in the area walking around with a cracked rib these days.

It seems he decided to do some wrestling in his living room and came out second best. But we are happy to report that he didn't get pinned.

Fire record-tying 65s

Shaw, Sikes lead Doral

MIAMI (UPI)—Tom Shaw, the bubbling young man from Golf, Ill., and Dan Sikes, the "Chicken Baron" of North Florida, both shot record-tying 7-under-par 65s Thursday to share the first round lead in the $150,000 Doral Open golf tournament.

The 26-year-old Shaw, who has never finished higher than sixth in a half dozen inconsistent years on the PGA tour, and Sikes, a 38-year-old Jacksonville, Fla., attorney who recently went into the fried chicken business, thus took a one-stroke lead over Australian Bruce Devlin who had led the early finishers with his 66.

Their 65s tied the Doral record, last matched last year by Gardner Dickinson enroute to the tournament championship.

Shaw, who started out with a 63 last year in the Pensacola Open before fading as usual, was overjoyed.

"I'm having a great day," the stocky sun-streaked blond said. "I really enjoy it. I use to play the other way—but that's too hard."

Sikes, who won more than $100,000 last year but who is 91st on this year's money list with only $1,900, explained that although he played three tournaments in California: "I'm just getting started."

Lock Haven favored to unseat ESSC

CLARION — Powerful Lock Haven State (10-0) — ranked only behind Navy in the East — is favored to unseat East Stroudsburg State as Pennsylvania Conference wrestling champion here today and Saturday.

But host coach and meet director Robert Bubb of Clarion State regards the 25th annual meet of one of the nation's toughest small college wrestling conferences as a "real donnybrook." He said that all 12 colleges will help determine the winner.

"Lock Haven looks like the best bet," said Bubb, "with Bloomsburg (11-3-1) and East Stroudsburg (12-4) as the strong contenders and probably West Chester (4-4-1) and Clarion (11-3) and possibly California (9-2) as spoilers."

Some of the most spectacular matches of the tournament — first ever to be held at this northwestern Pennsylvania college — could come in the 123, 137 and heavyweight classes where 1968 champions Ken Melchior, Ron Russo and Rich Schumacher will be defending.

Melchior, Lock Haven's NCAA 115-pound champion in 1968, will step up to 123 where he will be challenged by Bloomsburg's Wayne Heim (12-2-1) and West Chester's Ron Cruys (7-1).

Melchior (9-0), decided Heim during the regular season, but by the barest of margins. The score was 8-8 with 30 seconds remaining when Melchior got a takedown and then added to his riding time for an 11-8 victory.

Cruys handed Heim his only other defeat, 4-3. Cruys has not wrestled Melchior this season. Bob Rosenfeld of Edinboro will also be a factor at 123 with his 12-0 record.

Russo (13-0-2) of Bloomsburg, was ranked sixth in the nation last year. He and Lock Haven's Larry Rippey (9-0-1) fought to a 5-5 draw in the 137-pound class this winter. And the two will probably meet in the finals again this weekend.

Russo's other draw was with Clarion's Don Knisely who was later bumped off his team by Randy Stine.

"That shows you how tough this league is," said Bubb.

Defending heavyweight champ Schumacher (13-2-1) of East Stroudsburg, expects to get his stiffest test from Bloomsburg's Jim McCue (12-1-2). They wrestled to a 1-1 stalemate earlier this season.

The meet will be run off in four sessions: the 2 p.m. preliminaries and 7 p.m. quarter-finals today, and the 1 p.m. semifinals and 8 p.m. finals on Saturday.

"There are going to be some real surprises," promised Bubb.

Blum breaks ankle in spill

Tuesdee Testa last at Santa Anita

ARCADIA, Calif. (UPI)—Tuesdee Testa became the first woman rider ever to compete in a regular race at Santa Anita but finished last and jockey Walter Blum suffered an ankle fracture in a spill in an earlier race Thursday.

Mrs. Testa, 25, an exercise girl, rode Gallarush, a 7-year-old mare, in the seventh race and never was in contention in the 6 1/2 furlong test.

Favored Indian Love Call was first in the nine-horse field. Gallarush finished 11 lengths behind the winner.

A crowd of 21,513 greeted Mrs. Testa warmly when she mounted Gallarush.

Blum, 34-year-old former national riding champion, was injured when his mount, Fret Holme, unseated him at the start of a three-furlong dash for maiden 2-year-old fillies.

X-rays taken at nearby Arcadia Methodist Hospital showed Blum received a spiral fracture of the right ankle. It is not known when he can return to racing.

Thursday's $25,000-added San Jacinto Stakes was won by unbeaten Majestic Prince, a brilliant 3-year-old colt being pointed toward the $100,000 Santa Anita Derby and the triple crown classics.

With Bill Hartack in the saddle, Majestic Prince, the heavy favorite, was clocked in 1:36 3/5 for a mile and won by four lengths for his fifth victory in a row.

Mrs. Joe F. was second and Elect The Ruler finished third.

Carrying the top weight of 122 pounds, Majestic Prince paid $2.80, $2.20 and $2.20 across the board. Mr. Joe F. returned $2.60 and $2.20 while Elect The Ruler was worth $2.80.

Leafs tie Flyers on Walton's goal

Penguins top Hawks in third

PITTSBURGH (UPI)—Jean Pronovost and Val Fonteyne scored last period goals to offset a three-point night by Bobby Hull and give the Pittsburgh Penguins a 4-3 victory over the Chicago Black Hawks.

Stan Mikita tallied at 15:38 to cut the final margin to one goal.

Hull, who assisted on Mikita's goal, was responsible for Chicago's two other goals, his 44th and 45th of the season. Lou Angotti and Bob Woytowich registered Pittsburgh's other markers, both coming with Chicago short-handed.

Hull tied the game at 1-1 at 12:21 of the middle period from a sharp angle up close and deadlocked the game again at 2-2 when he skated between two defensemen and faked Joe Daley at 1:52 of the final period.

Walton had been suspended by the Leafs after failing to show for a game eight days ago.

Jim Johnson scored the Flyers' lone goal on a rebound shot in the second period when he drove to the net in a clear field.

Fourteen penalties were called during the game with the Leafs' Pat Quinn drawing a five-minute penalty, also for slashing. Quinn's slash opened a cut over Don Blackburn's left eye which required five stitches.

First Period—No scoring. Penalties: Horton 3:24; Bernier 4:06; Horton 8:03; Sarrazin 8:42; Horton 11:34.
Second Period—Philadelphia, Johnson 13 (Dornhoefer, self); 5:24. Penalties: Dornhoefer 9:05; Quinn, Major, 14:55; Sarrazin 18:59.

One best umpire

NEW YORK — It had the teasing quality of a bowl of peanuts with too few peanuts in it. There wasn't enough to nibble on regardless of the urge to continue. Not long ago a fascinating presentation was made in the New York Times in the form of vest pocket vignettes of a half-dozen or so of the more colorful characters who have contributed so much to the baseball legend.

Cruel space restrictions kept it much too short because this is a topic that could fill library shelves. In fact, it already has since no sport has a more extensive bibliography than baseball.

The chances are that every fan noticed at least one hall of fame favorite who had been squeezed out of the compendium. The one omission that struck me was that no umpire was mentioned although the Men in Blue form the solid foundation on which the entire superstructure rests. And the foundation stone on which the umpire's foundation still rests was Bill Klem, the self-styled Old Arbiter.

Excellence admitted
He was the greatest of all umpires, a designation he never questioned because he was an arrogant little autocrat with sublime confidence in both his ability and infallibility. He even caused the umpire-baiting John McGraw of the Giants to make a grudging admission.

"If there ever was a good umpire," he said, "it's Bill Klem."

A battle with McGraw produced one of baseball's most enduring phrases. It happened as a result of an important game with the Cubs in a ball park where the scoreboard cut across the foul line on the outfield wall, partly in fair territory and partly in foul which. But the line started at the bottom of the wall, leaped across the scoreboard and then continued up to the top. A giant hitter cracked a shot off the scoreboard at the precise spot where the line should have been but wasn't.

"Foul ball!" bellowed Klem in his foghorn voice.

McGraw shot out of the dugout, beside himself with rage. He ranted and raved. Klem remained unshakable as usual. So did his call. The next day the groundskeeper approached the old arbiter.

"Bill," he said, almost apologetically, "McGraw ordered me to examine the scoreboard to see where that hit landed. I found the dent where the ball struck. Would you believe it? It was foul by three inches."

"Naturally," thundered Klem, a gleam of quiet satisfaction in his eyes. "I never missed one in my life."

Thus did the legend of his infallibility begin. He was good enough to last for 36 years and he umpired in 19 World Series. When he finally was named supervisor of National League umpires, he selected the title of "chief of staff." He like the pompous sound of it.

Before this jolly little rooster arrived on the scene, umpires were second-class citizens. They dressed in their working clothes in their hotels and rode the streetcars to the ball park. A few borrowed the toolkeeper's shed as a dressing room, using a bucket of water for a shower. But Klem brought dignity and respect to his trade when he demanded — and got — special dressing rooms with shower baths at the ball parks for the arbiters and he raised the stature of his profession so much that even today he is the patron saint of all umpires.

Until Foghorn Bill came along, umpires were abused disgracefully by managers and many were ridden out of baseball. But Klem became such a symbol of total authority that other umpires followed his example. Klem's first run-in with McGraw gained him the respect of the man who dominated the sport. It came after an adverse decision against the Giants.

"I'll have your job for this," screamed McGraw.

"Mister McGraw," said Klem evenly, "if it's possible for you to take away my job, I don't want it."

Admiration society
Although they fought constantly on the field, they developed so much admiration for each other that they were frequent dinner companions. They argued, of course, and the Little Napoleon paid little heed to one Klem dictum: "John, you'll never get fat arguing rules with the Old Arbiter." But McGraw persisted to do so one day on the diamond.

"I learned you that rule last year," said Klem.

"And it's about time you learned something about grammar," said the college-educated McGraw. "You can't learn anything to anyone. You can teach him but you can't learn him."

"Mister McGraw," said Bill sadly, "it begins to look as though I can neither learn you nor teach you. You're hopeless."

Bill Klem was a delightful companion, one who did more for umpires than any man who ever lived. In recognition of that fact he is in the Hall of Fame where he belongs. When legendary characters are listed it seems wrong to overlook him.

Redskins acquire Tom Brown

GREEN BAY, Wis. (UPI) — Tom Brown, who played key roles in two games crucial to the Green Bay Packers' three successive National Football League crowns, was traded Thursday to the Washington Redskins.

The 28-year-old defensive half-back will be rejoining his old coach, Vince Lombardi, in the capital city and the deal was the first completed by either the Packers or Redskins since Lombardi went to Washington earlier this month.

In return for Brown, the Redskins gave Green Bay an undisclosed, "relatively high" draft choice.

Brown, a 5-year veteran and the Green Bay interception leader, last fall, operates an insurance business during the off-season in Washington and had been known to want to return to his home town.

The former Maryland star was drafted by Lombardi for the Packers in the second round of the 1963 draft. After an unsuccessful and brief try with the Washington Senators and pro baseball, he joined the Packers and became a starter one year later.

In the 1966 National Football League title game against Dallas it was Brown's end zone interception that saved the day for the Packers. Against Los Angeles in the Western Division playoff game the next year, Brown's interception set up the first Green Bay touchdown.

Last season Brown grabbed off four enemy passes, returned 16 punts for 111 yards and one touchdown and scored a second touchdown on a fumble recovery.

CLEARWATER, Fla. (UPI)—The Phillies signed two of their highest paid players Thursday, outfielders Richie Allen and John Callison, leaving five players still unsigned.

Allen, who hit 33 homers last season to finish second in the National League, was believed to have received a small raise, putting him in the $70,000 bracket. Callison, who had a bad year, partly due to a severe groin injury, said he signed for a slight cut at about $45,000.

Pitchers Woody Fryman and Rick Wise, infielders Tony Taylor and Rick Joseph and outfielder John Briggs are those still unsigned.

506,283 jobs found for state people

STROUDSBURG — John K. Tabor, State Secretary of Labor and Industry, Thursday said 506,283 "jobs for people" were found in Pennsylvania during 1968 by the State Employment Service.

Of the 506,283 job placements made in the state, 276,898 were listed as business and industrial jobs for Pennsylvania workers.

The report, made by Tabor, shows an increase in business and industrial jobs of 8,274 from the previous year.

New applications for non-white persons for the last six-month period total over 46,000; referrals of these applicants reached 75,000, of which more than 43,000 resulted in job placements. 18,229 of these placements are listed as short-term or less than three days.

Tabor said approximately 20 per cent of all applicants in the state for the last six-month period were non-white, and approximately 30 per cent of all placements were non-white.

Locally, John P. Dougherty, reported that business and industrial job placements totalled 2,523 for the year just ended.

However, a decline in jobs in the agricultural field was reported for 1968.

Adopted six-year-old boy representing retarded units

STROUDSBURG — Jon Mark Brown, an adopted six year old boy, has been chosen as the national representative of the 1,303 mentally retarded persons of Pennsylvania and the more than six million retarded persons in the nation.

The announcement was made locally by James B. Grover, president of the Monroe County Chapter, Pennsylvania Association for Retarded Children.

The county association is one of the 1,300 affiliated units meeting regularly every second Tuesday of the month in the Stroudsburg YMCA at 7:30 p.m.

The 1969 Poster Child of the national association is teaching himself to play the piano by ear. Jon's selection demonstrates that a retarded child who is adopted can be brought up and thrive within a normal family atmosphere.

His adopted parents are Mr. and Mrs. Louis Brown of Fort Smith, Ark. They have two other children, a daughter 17 and a daughter, 22 years old.

Brown is dean of occupational education and director of development for Westark Junior College, Fort Smith; president of the Sebastian County Assn. for Retarded Children. Mrs. Brown is president of the Post Parent-Teacher Group.

British co-eds

LONDON (AP) — More than one-quarter of the students attending British universities are women. An official report says female full-time students number 49,928, or 27 per cent of the total.

Six-year-old Jon Mark Brown of Fort Smith, Ark., the 1969 poster child of the National Association for Retarded Children, is joined by his father, Louis, at the piano. Jon, who is adopted, is learning to play by ear.

New York's Voice of Broadway

NEW YORK — There's a hustle-on in Green Bay to rename its street recently named after Vince Lombardi, the coach who abandoned that winter wonderland...Bobo Rockefeller had a so-long gourmet meal at Chateau and sailed off on the Italian ship Raffaello to Cannes...Milt Kamen was "King of the Carnival" at Saranac...Now Milt's a glamor boy?...Arbitrageurs say the franc will devalue this year.

The droll Terry-Thomas demands that when his films play his hometown of Finchley, England, he gets his correct name on the marquee: Terry Thomas Hoar-Stevens...Robert Grave's son William opened his second Majorcan hotel for young Yankee students...Silly Putty manufacturer Peter Hodgson named his mini-yacht the Silly Putt Putt.

Broadway characters bet on anything: the other night they laid bets on which snowpiles and plows would dissemble first...McCall's byliner Selma

Robinson busted her nose when she skidded on the way home from interviewing millionaire decorator Melanie Kahane, who's even handsomer than she's rich.

An old Broadway nightlife favorite, 81-year-old Billy Coles, who once was a performer and became privy counselor as well as floorshow singer at the "18" Club, more recently at the Gay 90s, is in Harlem Hospital, Ward 2-B after being hit by a car.

Charles Azaavour made a bid for the Duke of Windsor's Paris mill...Japan's motorists are considered land-bugging kamikaze pilots (we saw three fatal car crashes in one day there)...Japan's Toyota car firm will give $250,000 to orphans of parents who die in the line of traffic when its 5,000,000 car dashes off the production line...Wendell Burton had five years of piano lessons, three of violin and two of trumpet and makes his screen debut in "The Sterile Cuckoo"—playing a kazoo.

Ex-gridster Roosevelt Grien will be the Easter attraction in the "Joe the Bartender's Room" at Miami's Hilton Plaza...Bess Truman quietly, as she does most things, celebrated her 84th birthday... "Murder Inc." is the name of the rock-gang at Barney Google's.

Former Vietnam ruler Bao Dai's son Bao Long hired beautiful decorator Isabelle Hebey to fix up his Paris flat and now they'll be wed in June. Joey Heatherton, who's come close, swears she'll never cavort nude on the screen.

Get own girl

By JEAN ADAMS

LOST PAL: (Q.) All summer I hung around with a friend. Now I've almost lost his friendship because he likes this girl and doesn't have time for me any more.

I've tried over and over to split them up, but they stick together. What can I do? I miss him.

B. IN NORWALK, CONN.

(A.) Get yourself a girl of your own and quit worrying about him. He's doing the right thing. You're not if you keep trying to split them up because of your jealousy.

LOST DATE: (Q.) Last summer I dated a boy. All my friends said he had a bad reputation. They were wrong. I liked him and so did my whole family.

(A.) If he knew all the time about the other boy and just now decides he doesn't like your

"past" and breaks a very SPECIAL date. 1 he's not worth your time and devotion; 2 he has bad manners; 3 he really didn't care very much for you, since he believed your best friend instead of you; 4 he should see you at the dance having FUN with somebody else in the $48 dress, and 5 you should find another "best friend" who won't tell lies about you.
